Albert Jackson

The sudden death in Washington of Albert N. Jackson, Dallas Times Herald executive, is a distinct loss to the institution he served for 45 years, to journalism and to this community to which he was so dedicated.

He learned to love Dallas and to admire its civic spirit as a city hall reporter for 15 years. "Albert was the most professional journalist I've ever known," Times Herald Board Chairman James Chambers declared. "The smallest details were there in all his stories."

Later his interests extended to state and national politics, and such figures as Lyndon Johnson and Sam Rayburn respected his counsel and judgment.

But his first love was Dallas and its more substantial elements which have given this city a civic pride, a progressive spirit and an unselfish leadership. Albert Jackson certainly was a respected part of that leadership, and his counsel always was sought and respected.

The News joins Jackson's colleagues at the Times Herald in a sincere feeling of regret at his passing. To all newsmen, he was a friend. To the profession, he was a credit. — Dallas (Tex.) Morning News

For Fairness in NLRB

National Labor Relations Board bias toward labor unions is a trademark of common recognition among those whose business comes before it.

In recent years considerable support has risen for Federal legislation transferring NLRB jurisdiction over unfair labor practices to the Federal Courts.

Sen. John Tower of Texas is author of a measure designed to correct the "imbalance of bargaining strength" against the employer. "It in no way touches or changes the substance of labor law," the Senator insists. "What is defined as an unfair labor practice in law today will be so when this bill becomes law. Its effect is procedural only."

Under the proposal, NLRB would continue to rule in union representation matters. But the agency would lose its authority to issue decisions in unfair labor practices.

Controversial as the plan may be to labor unions, it most certainly fits the measure of equity and fair play. There is every reason a union should favor adjudication in a court of law. There is only one reason, and that a selfish one, that it doesn't: they've got a good deal, and know it, with the NLRB. — Tulsa (Okla.) World

Colonel Says Unadvised of Rights

By DAVID GOELLER

Associated Press Writer

FT. MEADE, Md. (AP) — An Army judge has agreed to a hearing into defense contentions Col. Oran K. Henderson was not properly advised of his rights when he testified before a Pentagon panel investigating an alleged coverup of the My Lai massacre.

Col. Peter S. Wondolowski set no date Thursday for the hearing pending the availability of a witness of Lt. Gen. William R. Peers, who headed the panel.

Henderson, 50, was ordered court-martialed following a three-month investigation by the Peers panel into the handling of the field probe into the My Lai operation.

The much-decorated career officer was accused of dereliction of duty, failure to obey a lawful regulation, false swearing and making a false official statement.

Henry L. Rothblatt, Henderson's civilian attorney, said the Peers committee failed to properly inform the accused soldier he was a possible suspect and had the right to counsel.

Hoffa Backed Jonesboro Nun Finds New Life in Making and Selling Ceramics

HOLLYWOOD, Fla. (AP) — Teamsters union President James R. Hoffa—still powerful after four years in prison—has received a go-ahead from other top leaders of the union for a last-ditch try to win his freedom and resume control of the trucker's union.

"Jimmy wants 20 days until the first week in June before he makes up his mind on whether to run for re-election," a high union source said Thursday of Hoffa's latest bid for freedom on a claim of new evidence.

"They are going to wait for him," said the source of the action of the Teamsters Executive Board meeting here.

"If he gets out of prison and is free to run he will be re-elected," said the source—one of 14 members board. Hoffa is the 15th member of the board of the 2-million-member union.

Hoffa, imprisoned at the federal penitentiary at Lewisburg, Pa., sent word through attorneys that he hoped to be freed on the basis of a statement attributed to a key federal witness and allegedly recanting his testimony at Hoffa's jury tampering trial in Chattanooga, Tenn., in 1964. Hoffa was found guilty and sentenced to eight years in prison.

The new evidence is an alleged statement by Edward Grady Partin, a Teamsters union official in Baton Rouge, La. Partin has denied the statement was his.

The statement said the writer committed perjury during testimony at Hoffa's trial.

The statement was handed Thursday to U.S. Dist. Court Judge Frank Wilson of Chattanooga, who presided over Hoffa's 1964 trial. Wilson said he would study it.

The development reportedly upset plans of most other Executive Board members to line up behind acting Teamsters president Frank E. Fitzsimmons and elect him president at the union's convention less than two months away.

The board members—Thornton, Gov. Dale Bumpers and Secretary of State Kelly Bryant—have been working for more than two months trying to find a suitable way to redistrict the Arkansas Legislature.

Thornton said he favored single-member districts, but the board had run into problems creating single-member districts in both houses without overlapping boundaries.

Apportioning Problems Told

BLITHEVILLE, Ark. (AP)—

Atty. Gen. Ray Thornton Jr. told the Association of Arkansas County Judges here Thursday night of some of the problems encountered by the state Board of Apportionment.

The board members—Thornton, Gov. Dale Bumpers and Secretary of State Kelly Bryant—have been working for more than two months trying to find a suitable way to redistrict the Arkansas Legislature.

Thornton said he favored single-member districts, but the board had run into problems creating single-member districts in both houses without overlapping boundaries.

JONESBORO, Ark. (AP) — Each day she goes to her little shop and makes and sells ceramic articles to the public. Late each afternoon, she returns to Holy Angels Convent to participate in the familiar spiritual life-style of an Olivetan Benedictine Sister.

For the past few months that has been the routine for Sister Charlotte of Jonesboro, who for more than 20 years has been a teacher and administrator in the parochial school system operated by the religious order.

The new life in the small red ceramic shop on East Oak began several months ago, and Sister Charlotte says: "There came a time I no longer felt the call to teach, and I found a new creative experience when I started working with clay. My basic inspiration came with this experience."

About 18 months ago, Sister Charlotte left the classroom. Mother M. Benedicta had granted her a year of renewal — a time to meditate, to think to get closer to God.

During this year, a small studio was set up on the Holy Angels Convention grounds, and Sister Charlotte worked with ceramics—a field in which she had always had an interest.

Fox six weeks last summer, Sister Charlotte spent much of her time at Nazareth College in Bardonia, N.Y., discussing theology with adult groups, and she says, "I found that I could best serve God in talks and discussions, in informal learning situations with adults. The one thing that really interests me more than art is theology."

While at Nazareth, she also taught pottery in workshops. Ceramics and religious work with adults continued to interest Sister Charlotte, and at the college she talked with a Trappist brother who operated an art studio.

As her year of renewal neared its end, Sister Charlotte made a decision. She asked Mother Benedicta if she could pursue the idea of opening her own studio in Jonesboro, similar to one another sister of the Benedictine Order had in operation.

Permission was granted, and the small studio was opened. Profits go to further the work of the Benedictine Sisters.

A kiln was erected on a small back porch of the house, and a pottery wheel was brought in. A routine began to develop, the one Sister Charlotte now follows. From 8 a.m. until 5 p.m.—with the exception of a lunch break—she is at the shop. The remainder of her time is spent in the convent.

During the days she is a manufacturer and merchant of beautiful glazed and unglazed pottery of all shapes and forms. Evenings she is deeply engrossed in the religious life of a convent.

Sometimes she is away from her shop for a few hours during the day, speaking before adult groups or teaching and lecturing on religious subjects.

"Art is a spiritual expression," Sister Charlotte said, "and man is an embodied spirit. Man's spiritual quest has to develop in the physical world."

She adds: "Religion does not say we have to endure this life to enjoy eternity."

The church and art have been a part of Sister Charlotte's life since she was a young child growing up in Jonesboro.

She attended Blessed Sacrament School and graduated from Holy Angels Academy. Her early training from the Sister taught her the beauty and joy of creative art. She was never far from the church.

Her decision to give her life to God came about the time she was graduated from high school and she began her training toward the vows of an Olivetan Benedictine Sister.

Her education in art was continued, and she received a degree magna cum laude, from the College of St. Scholastica in Duluth, Minn.

She also received a masters degree from North Texas State in Denton.

Her teaching career led her to parochial schools in Little Rock, where she was an instructor and junior high principal, and Muenster, Tex. She has slightly more than 20 years in the classroom.

Last week, Sister Charlotte and Mrs. Robert Davidson, a local artist and metal sculptor, pooled their talents for a combination show and sale. Both artists sold what they made.

"What has happened during the past few months is a beginning and I hope to grow both as an artist and as a teacher of adults," Sister Charlotte remarked.

At the show there was a round table Sister Charlotte had created in her studio-shop. Made of glazed ceramic tile, these words from Ecclesiastes were inlaid on the top:

"To everything there is a reason, and a time to every purpose under the heavens."

Nature-Loving Swedes Beat Off Axe-Men Attacking Old Oaks

STOCKHOLM (AP) — A

barage of rocks from 1,000 furious nature lovers repelled ax-wielding workmen and their police escort from a condemned stand of elms in the center of Stockholm.

The conservationists claimed a first-round victory in what has become the hottest environmental issue in Sweden.

The angry demonstrators were waiting for the police-protected workmen when they arrived before dawn to cut down the trees, which city authorities say must go to make way for a subway station.

The White House is conducting one of the most strenuous lobbying efforts of the Nixon administration in its bid to defeat the Mansfield amendment.

The outcome is considered close—with a large block of undecided senators apparently holding the balance.

Case, who favors the thrust but possibly not the specifics of Mansfield's amendment, lost his attack on comments made a day earlier by White House press secretary Ronald L. Ziegler, who said the President would not settle for a compromise in the fight.

"This is intolerable," the usually mild-mannered Case said. "I think it was also most undiplomatic of Mr. Ziegler" unless it was part of a plan under which "it was intended that Congress be humiliated."

Pell, an advocate of compromise, attacked former Secretary of State Dean Acheson's comment that it was asinine to cut U.S. troop strength without a reciprocal Soviet cut.

Acheson was one of a group of former U.S. diplomats and generals who met with President Nixon Thursday to map strategy against the Mansfield amendment.

Acheson's use of "asinine," Pell told Rogers, "turns us off—those of us who are skeptical."

Rogers called the Mansfield amendment "a mistake of historic proportions" and said the United States could kiss goodbye any hopes of a mutual U.S.-Soviet troop cut if the proposal is adopted.

Rogers rejected Fulbright's assertion that two events, expected admission of Britain into the Common Market and a Soviet call for mutual troop cuts, resulted from Mansfield's introduction of the troop-cut amendment.

At the same time, Lyng estimated 1.7 million persons in states with lower income ceilings would become eligible.

About 10.6 million persons now receive food stamps.

Under the new regulations, subject to revision after review of public comments, a family of four with combined total income up to $360 a month would be eligible.

Only Alaska, New Jersey and New York have lower cut off levels.

The proposed income scale, however, is more restrictive on one and two-person households. For example, California now cuts off one person at $185 a month income and two persons at $240. The proposed new national maximum is $160 and $210, respectively.

The definition of a household also is being challenged in a letter from the six Republican members of the special Senate Nutrition Committee. They complained the Agriculture Department misinterpreted a provision of the law admittedly designed to disqualify so-called hippie communes.

Department officials say the regulation follows the law's definition of a household as "a group of related individuals."

The senators quoted Allen J. Ellender, D-La., chairman of the Senate Agriculture Committee, as saying the provision was "designed to exclude households consisting of unrelated individuals under the age of 60, such as hippie communes."

Europe Troop Indians Win Hearing on Charge Town Is Denying Them Service

WINNER, S.D. (AP) — A

Sioux Indian, backed by government-funded lawyers, has won a hearing in federal court on his charges that the poor Indian Town section of this rural marketing center is being deprived of its share of municipal services.

John Fire brought the suit against Mayor Paul Blomstrom and eight other city officials claiming services such as electricity, sewage and street paving are provided in an "intentionally discriminatory manner."

U.S. Dist. Court Judge Andrew Bogue of Rapid City denied the city's request Monday to throw out Fire's suit and set a hearing for June 1 on the request of a preliminary injunction against the city.

Judge Bogue cited a Jan. 23 ruling by the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals that the Mississippi town of Shaw was required to bring about "equalization" of services for white and black areas. The appeals court found that nearly all homes fronting unpaved streets and without sewers were inhabited by blacks and that this amounted to discrimination.

Fire claims a similar situation exists in Indian Town, a narrow strip of plank and tar-paper shacks near the business district of this county seat of 3,800.

In his suit on behalf of all Indian Town's residents, he said the predominantly white uphill section has paved streets, sidewalks, drainage systems, electricity, sewage and other services that are lacking in Indian Town.

"At all times, but especially during the spring, rain and melting snow funnel efficiently and rapidly down the paved streets and gutters and flood into Indian Town," the suit said.

The mayor said steps were being taken to create a city planning commission and a housing authority to study some of Winner's problems.

"These charges of discrimination are ridiculous. There are some areas of town that need improved services. But we haven't ignored this district because Indians live there. That just isn't true," he said.

Fire's lawyers have told him not to discuss the case while its pending but John King, a neighbor and a Sioux, said the suit is not backed by all Indians in the area.

"People in this town are unhappy with John Fire," said King, who is a community organizer for the Office of Economic Opportunity.

"He is even having difficulty with other Indians. Their attitude is that John Fire is causing trouble. Many of them are afraid they'll lose their jobs with the city or that the city will cut their lights off if they're two days late with their bill."

Must Have Goods for the Ads

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Trade Commission has ruled a grocery store advertising sales must have enough goods on hand to meet reasonable demand at the special price.

A grocery chain may not use such disclaimers as "not all items available in all stores" to get around the ruling, the FTC held Wednesday. And providing "rain checks" for later use at sale prices will not meet the test.

The regulation is effective July 12.

The commission said in the future it plans to apply the same principle to other advertised commodities, apparently meaning the ruling will be extended to such businesses as department, drug and hardware stores.

"What we're looking for," said Robert Pitofsky, director of the FTC Bureau of Consumer Protection, "is a store that systematically advertises a product and then consistently doesn't have the product on the shelves at the advertised price."

Failure to abide by the new rule could be punishable as an unfair trade practice and subject the offender to civil penalties.

The ruling arises from a 1967-68 study of 137 stores operated by 10 grocery chains in San Francisco and Washington.

Eleven per cent of advertised items were not available in most stores, the study showed, and only eight of the 137 outlets checked had every advertised item.

Fewer advertised products were available in low-income areas than in wealthier sections. And nearly 10 per cent of the specials were marked at prices above those in the sales advertisements.

The FTC said the new rule excuses a retailer if demand for advertised specials exceeds reasonable expectations, or if he can prove the stock was unavailable through no fault of his.

11th Hour Try to Halt R.R. Strike

federal mediator is attempting to schedule formal contract negotiations this weekend in an effort to avert a nationwide railroad strike by the signalmen's union.

As informal talks continued Friday, Asst. Secretary of Labor J.W. Usery tried to get all parties together at the bargaining table.

C.J. Chamberlain, president of the AFL-CIO Brotherhood of Railroad Signalmen, refused to retract his 6 a.m. Monday strike deadline and took a dim view of settlement chances.

"They don't look good," he said. "All of our teams are organized and are prepared to picket the proper places."

Although the union's 13,000 members represent a small fraction of the nation's rail workers, their pickets at commuter and intercity rail lines almost certainly would be honored by other unions.

The signalmen, without a contract since Jan. 1, were free to strike at 12:01 a.m. Saturday after time ran out on the 60-day cooling off period ordered by President Nixon.

Only a court order or congressional action could head off a strike if negotiations fail.

Congress passed a special act to end a one-day rail strike by four big unions earlier this year.

The signalmen are demanding a 54 per cent increase in their $3.78 hourly wage and have rejected a presidential emergency board's recommendation of a 42 per cent boost over 42 months.

Canadians Hit Absence Black Executives

DETROIT (AP) — A Canadian company which arrived behind a veil of secrecy has performed the rock opera "Jesus Christ Superstar" after a court order banned an American group from giving the show in a copyright dispute.

"We snuck it in under the table, so to speak," said Gerry Dere, 27, of Edmonton, Alta., who arranged and conducted the score for the sell-out performance Thursday night.

The 30 Canadians, representing three rock groups based in Edmonton, had performed the opera eight times earlier in Western Canada within the past month.

They arrived unheralded in Detroit Thursday, rehearsed and then went on stage Thursday night, only a few hours after their appearance was announced.

The reason for the secrecy, said copromoter Barry Appleby of Toronto, Ont., was to forestall the possibility of a temporary injunction prohibiting the Canadians from performing the show.

He said the Canadian cast, many of whom had performed the opera in Edmonton Wednesday night, were taken secretly to hotel rooms on their arrival in Detroit and were told not to discuss the show.

The impression was given to outsiders, he said, that the Canadians were only in Detroit on their way to St. Louis for a performance.

During the opera, which portrays Christ's last days before the Crucifixion, the Canadians sang all but three songs from the original score, with some 50 members of the Detroit Symphony Orchestra providing the music.

The cast received a standing ovation lasting a minute and a half from the crowd of 11,000 at the Cobo Arena at the conclusion of the opera.

U.S. Dist. Court Judge Constance B. Motley of New York originally had issued an injunction at the request of the opera's composers and two British firms prohibiting the American Rock Opera Co. from performing the opera at Detroit, on the grounds of copyright infringement.

They said the regulation would cut off families "who are not a friend."

City Lifelines

New York "subway" climbs above ground, here in Brooklyn, with the Manhattan skyline in the background.

In Manhattan, the subway's the subway (except for one small section in the north of the island). But in Brooklyn, Queens and the Bronx many of the rapid transit system's trains still rumble on above ground, on surface lines which thread their way through the city's densely woven fabric, still looking very much as they did when they were built in the 20s.

The Manhattan avenues once dominated and darkened by the elevated lines are now rebuilt almost beyond recognition. The "Els" have been removed and the busy life of the trains has gone underground. But in the other boroughs of New York City, at least 100 miles of overland lines (out of a total rapid transit route mileage for the city of 237.23 miles) are more than just living history in a city of bewilderingly fast change, more than mere anachronisms nostalgically associated with past eras. By the simple fact of their physical presence, as well as their function, they are still a most vital and lived-with feature of city life. Some of the older cars will soon disappear into retirement, but for the rest it looks as though the old "Els" will go rumbling on for some time yet.

Marines, Like Army, Now Advertising

By ROBERT A. DOBKIN AP Military Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Maybe "Today's Army wants to join you," but as far as the Marines are concerned, "nobody's joining them; they'll be joining us."
The Army may have gotten the opening edge in the recruiting race with its $10.6 million experimental advertising campaign which began in March. But now the Marines have called in Madison Avenue to escalate the interservice rivalry with a campaign of their own which takes a few pot shots at the Army's pitch of a soft life and duty in Europe.
The Marines are emphasizing a small, tough elite force with no promises of the good life.
"We're a tough club to join, a tough team to make," says Corps commandant Gen. Leonard F. Chapman. "And that's exactly the way we're going to keep it."
Marines will be trained the way they've always been trained, he says. "No compromises, no short cuts, no promises except one—they'll be Marines . . ." And as for the Army's new recruiting slogan proclaimed in newspapers, radio and television ads—"Today's Army Wants To Join You"—Chapman says Marine recruits will know "nobody's joining them, they'll be joining us."
The theme carried throughout Chapman's speeches is taken from the new Marine Corps recruiting philosophy drawn up by its advertising agency, J. Walter Thompson.
The idea will be carried over on recruiting posters soon to go up all over the country.
One new poster shows a high school athlete walking along the street. The wording says "If you just want to be one of the boys, stick with the boys. The Marines are looking for a few good men."
Another poster from the ad agency shows a tough drill instructor chewing out a young recruit. "We never promised you a rose garden," it says.
The old slogan, "The Marine Corps builds men," has been tossed out in favor of "We Want Good Men—And Then We Make Them Better."

Norway, the European champions, got off to a very bad start against us and started to shoot for good scores in an effort to get back in contention.

Larsen, sitting South, opened with one club, which was artificial and forcing and showed 17 or more high-card points. Koppang, North, responded with an equally artificial two clubs to show specifically an ace and a king and tell nothing about queens and jacks.

Larsen's two diamonds showed a suit. Koppang's two no-trump showed a balanced hand and not much more than his ace and king. Larsen's three spades was supposed to show a spade suit, so Koppang raised him to four, whereupon Larsen jumped to six diamonds.

West opened the five of clubs. Larsen put up dummy's jack and, when it held, he was on his way. Trumps were drawn next and he led a heart toward dummy. West played the ace and led another club. Larsen won that in dummy, discarded a spade on the king of hearts, led a spade, finessed the queen and claimed the balance.

It wasn't the sort of slam you want to bid often. All he needed was to find three cards where he wanted them to be, but if North's king had been in spades instead of in hearts it would have been a reasonable bid. Anyway, who wants to quarrel with success?

Big Moment When Flight Instructor Starts Wife on Solo

By WADE EAVES

The Benton Daily Courier. BENTON, Ark. (AP) — "Not very long ago all I knew about airplanes was that Bob loved them," said Billie June Carson. Her husband, Bob, works for the Aluminum Co. of America when he isn't giving flying instructions.

Recently, he experienced his most trying, and rewarding, session with a student pilot.

Bob was in the right seat, the instructor's side, and his wife was practicing landings and takeoffs from the left seat. She executed a very good landing.

"Go around and try another one," Bob ordered sternly. Billie June rammed the push-pull throttle forward firmly and the Cherokee leaped back into the air.

On the second landing Bob as an instructor, not as a husband, ordered the airplane stopped on the runway. "You might as well take it around by yourself and shoot two landings," he yelled above the engine's noise.

An instructor got out of the airplane and left his most prized student; a nervous and shaking husband walked away to watch his wife's first flight alone.

"After he pushed the door shut and walked away," Billie June recalled, "I thought, this is it! I pushed the throttle all the way in. I knew I had to do everything exactly right."

Indeed she did everything right. Her first landing was flawless.

As she roared down the runway for her first takeoff, two sons, Robert 22, and Daniel, 10, drove up in a car. Neither dreamed their mother would be

BELATED TRIBUTE TO MOTHER

Dear Helen:
I'm a little late and kinda young, but can an 11-year-old tell you—WHAT IS A MOTHER?

A mother is someone who worries when you're late for dinner, and when you come in she starts to scold, but bursts out crying because she is glad you're safe.

She is someone who complains when she breaks a fingernail while mending one of your toys. Then you say, "I didn't ask you to do it!" but right away you're sorry because, after all, she DID fix it for you.

A mother is someone who puts you in bed if you have a cold and makes honey and lemon for you if your throat is scratchy. She is the person who taught you how to make finger paint and salt clay, and how to mold the clay and bake it.

A mother is the person who taught you good manners and feels embarrassed when you do something silly at a relative's table.

A mother is a person who lets you help make homemade bread and "stollen," and when you were younger let you make little ducks out of some of the stollen and put a cherry in the center.

She is the one who spends all day cooking dinner but, if Dad suggests it, she's ready like a flash to go out with all of us.

She goes shopping for four hours and decides that she likes the dress we saw two hours ago best, but can't remember which shop it was at.

A mother has time to talk to each of us specially and gives advice, but hardly ever seems to boss.

I could go on and on but let's face it, a mother is wonderful, and I would not like to live without one. —DIANE AND HAPPY

P.S. I'm sorry it's one week after Mother's Day.

Dear Helen:

How come?
Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday—school days—I oversleep and almost have to be kicked out of bed.

But on Saturday and Sunday, I wake up at 6 a.m. or earlier. Mom always says, "Tomorrow is the weekend, you don't have to get up," so there I am wide-awake and mad. —CRACK UP Dear C.U.:

I have that problem, too! But if I lie very still and think of all the dumb Saturday chores out there waiting for me—it's very easy to fall asleep again. —H.

Dear Helen:
I was out walking and came to this farm, and no one was home. So I walked in because the door was open.

There was some money in a cupboard—$3.25 to be exact—so I took it. The longer I keep it the more it bothers me. I never did anything like this before. Don't know what came over me.

Should I try to sneak in and put the money back? I don't know these people. I just couldn't go up to them and confess! —SORRY Dear Sorry:

Why not get the farmer's name (it will be on his mailbox out front) then send the money, together with an apology to his address? Whether you sign your name or not is up to you. The important thing is: You are not a thief. —H.

This column is dedicated to family living, so if you're having kid trouble or just plain trouble; let Helen help YOU. She will also welcome your own amusing experiences. Address Helen Bottel in care of (name of newspaper).

DR. LAWRENCE E. LAMB

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

Dear Dr. Lamb—My son was born with an undescended testicle. He is now nine years old. If it does not descend completely, what is your recommended treatment and at what age should it be started?

Dear Reader—I take it from your comments that you mean the testicle has not descended into the scrotum. The time to do something about your son's problem is now.

Before birth, the testes are located in the abdominal cavity. About the time of birth, or shortly thereafter, the testicles descend through an opening in the lower part of the abdominal wall, into the scrotal sac. It is this opening in the abdominal wall for the passage of the testes, that makes a man susceptible to hernias. The membranes and muscles guarding this opening weaken and a loop of intestine protrudes along the same canal used for the descent of the testicles.

If one or both testicles do not descend properly, they can be placed in their normal position by a surgical procedure and sometimes certain hormone therapy is indicated for improvement of development. In any case, if the testicles are not placed in the scrotal sac, they will not develop normally. Should both testicles happen to remain in the canal or in the abdominal cavity, the individual is usually sterile. The testes will produce no live sperm to make pregnancy possible. The other functions of the testicles may remain intact, providing normal masculinity of the individual in all other respects. The testicles should be in the scrotal sac before puberty is very far advanced to prevent sterility.

The increased body temperature seems to be a main factor preventing normal development. The scrotal sac helps control the temperature of the testicles by lowering or raising them closer to the body. When it is cold the muscles contract and the testicles are warmed and when it's hot they relax, letting the testicles cool—at least this was true before support underwear.

An undescended testicle is sometimes a site of malignancy, although this is rare. I would suggest that you have your son examined as soon as possible and, on your doctor's advice, proceed with the proper form of therapy without any further delay.

Bob Thomas at the Movies

By BOB THOMAS Associated Press Writer

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — This month marks the fourth anniversary of Cinema Center Films, CBS' bold venture into the movie-making jungle. After 26 feature films, the enterprise is considered a qualified success.

"We went into business at the worst possible time," says Gordon Stulberg, handsome, energetic president of the CBS subsidiary.

"Theater business was down and star salaries were up to a million dollars. But we matched the deals that were being made by other studios—matched, but did not exceed."

Stulberg emphasized the latter point. CBS is being sued by the major film companies for unfair competition, and one of the claims is that Cinema Center jacked up star salaries.

Cinema Center did pay the going wage, Stulberg said, to lure such million-dollar figures as John Wayne, Jack Lemmon, Steve McQueen and Lee Marvin. The result was a series of important films, some successful, some not so.

The company president discussed the hits and flops with disarming frankness:

"Our product can be divided into three categories. The first is comedy, and there we have done well: 'With Six You Get Eggnog,' 'April Fools,' 'A Boy Named Charlie Brown,' 'Me Natalie.'"

"The second category is action-adventure, and that has been our biggest success. 'Little Big Man' is our 'home run'; even though it cost $9 million because of weather in Calgary, it will be a big money maker. 'A Man Called Horse,' was also a smash, and we did well with 'The Reivers' and 'Rio Lobo.'"

Our failure has been in contemporary drama. That is like pursuing a will-o-the-wisp, hoping to get your picture to the market at exactly the right time, as with 'Joe' or 'Easy Rider.' We haven't been that lucky. 'Hail Hero,' 'Adam at 6 a.m.,' 'Homer' and 'Royal Hunt of the Sun'—which I considered contemporary in its racial conflict—were flops.

"Our best chance in that category was 'Boys in the Band.' It did well in the big cities, but the heartland of America simply wouldn't accept a film about homosexuality, even though it had no outright sex."

At the recent CBS shareholders meeting, board chairman William S. Paley expressed confidence in Cinema Center, even though the division hasn't turned a profit. That concerns Stulberg.

"CBS is a profit-oriented company," he noted. "What can I say when they ask me, 'You've had good product—where's the profit?'"

Stulberg is convinced that the problem lies in the relationship between the producer-distributor and the exhibitor—"Theater owners are operating under the same rules that existed 20 years ago, when film companies had their own theaters." As a result, he charged, theaters retain an unequal share of profits from movies.

IT MIGHT almost be the typical focal point of a tranquil New England town, but the white church with the tall steeple is actually a bird house, one of many built along church lines as a hobby by Joseph Bellport of Shorcham, N.Y.

(Editor's Note: Readers across the country have requested depth information on the apprenticeship program. This column is intended to provide background and basic information.)

Congress passed the National Apprenticeship Law in 1937. Popularly known as the Fitzgerald Act, it was enacted "to promote the furtherance of labor standards of apprenticeship... to extend the application of such standards by encouraging the inclusion thereof in contracts of apprenticeship, to bring together employers and labor for the formulation of standards of apprenticeship." It is an enabling act without mandatory injunctions.

As a result, the Federal Committee on Apprenticeship was reorganized and enlarged to include equal representation of employers and labor, plus a representative of the U.S. Office of Education. The Apprentice-Training Service (now the Bureau of Apprenticeship and Training in the Labor Department) was established to carry out objectives of the law, guided by recommendations of the committee.

Since 1937, the bureau has worked closely with employers and labor groups, vocational schools, state agencies and others concerned with industrial apprenticeship programs. It has field representatives in all of the 50 states. Its functions are advisory and promotional. It does not conduct training programs.

About 350 occupations—most in the construction, manufacturing, transportation and service industries—are covered in registered programs. At work in these programs are about 250,000 registered apprentices, the largest number ever.

Certificates of Completion of Apprenticeship are issued by state agencies or, where there are none, by the Bureau of Apprenticeship and Training. Management and labor committees develop local programs. In addition, trade committees representing national organizations formulate, with bureau assistance, policies on apprenticeship in the various trades and issue basic standards to be used by affiliated organizations. Programs registered by the Bureau of Apprenticeship and Training must assure:

- The starting age of the apprentice is not less than 16.
- Full and fair opportunity to apply for apprenticeship. (In a major new administration effort to help minority-group youths, federal regulations governing equal opportunity in the selection of apprentices have been revised. Secretary of Labor J. D. Hodgson notes that "for the first time, the U.S. Apprenticeship system will have specific measures to ensure that minorities will be afforded full and equal opportunity in all registered apprenticeship programs." The new regulations require full utilization of minority persons in apprenticeship programs, including an aggressive recruitment effort.)
- Selection of apprentices based upon qualifications alone.
- A schedule of work process in which an apprentice is to receive training and experience on the job.
- The program includes

Preakness Total Ahead of Derby's

NEW YORK (AP) — More than $500,000 was bet on The Preakness Friday with the New York City Off-Track Betting Corporation.

"This brings our unofficial total handle on the Preakness to $800,000," said Jack Banning, OTB director of operations.

"It appears that we will exceed our handle on the Kentucky Derby by the time we close our Preakness betting at noon Saturday."

The OTB mutual handle on the Derby at Churchill Downs in Louisville two weeks ago was $1,030,432. The Preakness will be run Saturday at Pimlico in Baltimore with post time approximately 5:40 p.m. EDT.

Banning also gave out a revised OTB odds line, based on the betting through 10 p.m. EDT Friday, that had Jim French a luke-warm favorite at 4-1.

"He would pay $10.60," Banning said after a check of his computer tabulation. This compares with the 5-2 probable on-track odds on Jim French at Pimlico were no actual bets have yet been taken.

Canonero II, winner of the Derby, and Bold Reason were co-second choices at 5-1 in the latest OTB odds.

Thereafter it was Executioner at 6-1, Eastern Fleet and Impetuosity each 8-1, Limit To Reason 9-1, Sound Off and Vegas Vic each 11-1, Royal J.D. 22-1 and Spouting Horn 28-1.

"From the closeness of the betting I suspect a lot of persons have put $2 on every horse in the race, just to be able to say they had the winner with OTB," Banning commented.

The Preakness is the second leg of the Triple Crown for 3-year-old thoroughbreds. The Belmont Stakes Stakes in New York on June 5 completes the series.

METS SURVIVE
NEW YORK (AP) — The weather was so bad the day the New York Mets opened the National League season here that only 19,848 fans turned out to watch the horses run at Aqueduct.

And less than 8,000 watched the first two harness races at Roosevelt Raceway, 20 miles out on Long Island. The last seven races were called off because of hazardous driving — on the track.

It snowed, it rained and winds were 50 mph but the Mets drew 26,062 top-coated fans and beat the Montreal Expos 4-2 in five innings. It was the first opener they had ever won at Shea Stadium, hard by Flushing Bay.

Mets Take Pirates Friday 8-2

Associated Press Sports Writer

Pitching is still a tour de force for the New York Mets, but nobody bullies their batting order anymore either.

The Mets continued to flex their muscles Friday night, pounding out 10 hits, including home runs by Bob Aspromonte and Cleon Jones, on the way to an 8-2 romp over the Pittsburgh Pirates.

New York has won 13 of its last 16 starts for a two-game lead over the second-place Pirates in the National League East. And the Mets' .271 team batting average is high in the league.

"You can see what it means if you get getting with our pitching," said Manager Gil Hodges. "It is exceeding my expectations."

Last year, the Mets topped the NL in pitching but were ninth in club batting with a .249 mark—while finishing third in the division title race.

In other National League action, San Francisco whipped Los Angeles 8-4; Cincinnati downed Montreal 5-2; Atlanta nipped Philadelphia 3-2; St. Louis beat Houston 4-2 and the Chicago Cubs edged San Diego 3-2.

In the American League, Oakland overhauled Kansas City 5-3; Boston blanked Baltimore 2-0; Cleveland shaded the New York Yankees 2-1; Washington topped Detroit 3-2; Minnesota defeated the Chicago White Sox 4-3 and Milwaukee trimmed California 4-1.

Lefthander Jerry Koosman pitched his first complete game of the year, for the Mets, who chased Pittsburgh starter Bob Johnson in the first inning, shooting ahead to stay on Ed Kranepool's two-run double.

They scored again in the second, padded the lead to 4-0 in the third on Jones' homer and wrapped it up with four runs in the seventh—the last three on Aspromonte's homer.

Aspromonte, who batted .213 as a part-time player with Atlanta last season, with no homers and seven runs batted in, has hit .265 thus far for the Mets and shares the club lead in homers, with three, and RBI, with 15.

"I've never seen this type of harmony on any club," Aspromonte said. "Everybody pulling for one another, everybody picking each other up, no super stars—the feeling is catching."

The runaway Giants roared from behind with a five-run rally in the seventh inning to flatten Los Angeles and widen their NL West Division lead to nine games.

Ken Henderson's run-scoring single tied the game 4-4, Tito Fuentes followed with a two-run single, Allan Gallagher singled home another run and the fifth scored on an error.

Chris Speier slammed his first major league homer and Willie Mays hit the 636th of his career for the Giants, who have won four in a row.

The Only Irishman to Win an Open

By MURRAY OLDERMAN

PORTRUSH, Northern Ireland — (NEA) — Man is a curious animal who seeks challenges. Otherwise, why go all the way to Ireland to play golf? And have the temerity to strike the ball in the presence of a former British Open champion.

My playing companion was Fred Daly, who back in 1947 won the British crown, as well as the British Masters, and collected under 1,000 pounds (roughly $2,500) for the year. "Now," said Fred, "the bloody caddie's getting more lolly."

Golf with Daly, a ruddy-faced veteran of 59, involves a whole new approach to the dictation of the game, and an appreciation of the surroundings.

We were on the Royal Portrush golf links in north Ulster, overlooking the North Channel of the Irish Sea, the site of 40 Irish and British championship tournaments, including the only British Open ever played in Ireland. It's a tangle of yellow-ochre gorse and reedlike bent grass around patches of emerald fairway and not a tree to mar the view of the sea, which darts out from limestone cliffs.

In surroundings such as these, Fred, the only Irishman ever to win an Open, comes out whistling and chortling. "Whistling Freddie" they called him when he played on four Ryder Cup teams.

"The whins are bloody lovely," he beamed, then strolled to the tee and with a compact swing whistled a drive straightaway 250 yards. Whins is colloquial for gorse, a bristly dense bush which abounds in yellow bloom all over Ireland and in the profanity of every Irish golfer.

Fred was born and bred in the tidy seaside resort of Portrush (although he's now the pro at Balmoral Golf Club in Belfast) and caddied in the old days when a pro was too menial to mingle with members in the clubhouse.

Now he's a local celebrity. The day before he had played a friendly match with a Welsh visitor to an impromptu gallery. This day the Welshman was simply on the grounds to breathe in the ocean breezes.

"Ah," said Fred sympathetically, "I see you've been sampling the strong waters here. I've had a few jars myself in me time."

He paused to survey the swing of his partner, who swayed and skulled a ball into no-man's land. "That earns ye a Mulligan," said Fred, which was comprehensive enough.

The trail to the fairway took us through a gully which for a moment completely shut us off from civilization. "The Indians'll be coming along any minute," he chirped. A long sand trap emerged like a mirage on the horizon. "You'll need a camel to get out of that," said Fred, not exactly a confidence breeder.

Then he lofted an iron—"A wee 8," he confided—dead on the pin, and as it settled comfortably on the

Fred Daly green 10 feet from the hole, he said. "That's got a bit of gum on it. I could smell the rubber as I swung."

He became a critic again as I hunched over a putt and chickened out on it. "Gaw," he said, "you look like Martha Dewey."

Prodded, Fred identified her as a cook in the navy, and progressed briskly from non sequitur to the weather as the sun and the sea and

Something Unforgettable

By IRA BERKOW

NEA Sports Editor

CHICAGO — (NEA) — One spring morning recently I stood behind the batting cage at Wrigley Field in my official capacity as sportswriter. I was faking it, for really I was 11 years old and I knew that any minute an usher would escort me out of there by the scuff of the collar.

A ball rolled under the cage and I picked it up. It was still white but discolored by a bruise of brown and a stain of green. The red stitching stood out. For some unaccountable reason I smelled it. Pungent to the core. There is a distinct, unforgettable muskiness to the tanned horsehide of a baseball. Smell being one of the greatest memory devices, it was so easy to be transported several yards and 20 years away to the moment I got my first big-league baseball.

The day before, my friends and I had fought in the autograph jungle under the cool stands as the Cubs of those days, Andy Pafo, Roy Smalley, Hal Jeffcoat, Hank Sauer, emerged big and tanned and hair-slicked from the clubhouse after the game.

Roy Johnson, whom everyone called "Hardrock," came out. He was a leathery-looking coach; pigeon-toed, too, which gave away his humor under the gruff veneer. He was in a hurry, he said, and had no time to sign. I continued in hot pursuit. No, no, he persisted. In desperation he said, Come to the park tomorrow, kid, and I'll give you a ball, slamming his car door a millimeter from my finger. I believed him. My friends were much too sophisticated. He was just givin' you the slip, dope. It was not all that easy to fall asleep that night.

Armed with the usual soft fruit my mother packed carving a soggy hole in the bottom of the brown bag—I was off to Wrigley Field with my friends. They poked little jokes, even up to the time I left them in the grandstand seats. I ran down through the shadowy stands as the park began to fill, past vendors hawking peanuts, past the steamy hot dogs on portable grills.

I had come down to the short red brick wall along the first-base line. Straight out was No. 42, Hardrock Johnson, cracking fungoes into the bright sky. I watched a ball drop through the clouds, down past the Baby Ruth billboard on the building across the street, get lost momentarily in the scattering of white shirts in the sunny bleachers and finally disappear silently into the outstretched glove of a fielder against the ivy-covered wall.

"Mr. Hardrock, sir," I called through cupped hands. No answer. I called again. "You promised me a ball yesterday, Mr. Hardrock, sir." Nothing, but the crack of his bat. "Just an old, dirty ball, Mr. Hardrock." The few adults seated nearby began to titter.

I'm not certain how long I kept this up, several minutes, surely. Soon, there was that predictable yank at the collar. I was explaining the situation to the grim usher when there came this great, throaty rumble, "Hey, kid!" Hardrock Johnson tossed me a ball in a long underhand toss. Up the stairs I flew.

They all wanted to see the ball, and I showed it to my friends. One by one—with me holding it. The ball created an uncomfortable wholly welcome bulge in the right front pocket of my blue jeans.

Home, I fondled the hard ball with the upraised stitching. I inspected the dirt and grass smudges closely, the Spalding trademark in a small baseball, the stars alongside "Official Ball, National League." The signature of Ford C. Frick, then League president. I smelled that tanned horsehide smell that has not changed in 20 years, that has not changed in 100 years.

Many suggestions were offered to get the ball as clean as new. The one that sold me was to put it in milk. I immersed the ball in a large bowl of milk for two days, periodically coming by and rolling it around with my finger to make sure no patch was left un milked.

When I finally removed it, the ball had turned a sick yellow. I mounted the ball on a shelf in my room, for awhile. But somehow it got out into the streets. Soon, one end was unstitched and became a flappy tongue and, shortly, the ball was reduced to a sphere of string.

At the batting cage now, I felt the red ridges against the smooth off-white horsehide. I slowly tossed the ball in the air a couple of times. I smelled it. Then I casually squeezed the ball into my suit-pants' pocket.

Queen Elizabeth, a leading stable owner in Britain, congratulates Princess Anne who came in fifth on her eight-year-old "Doublet" in recent horse trials, a good enough showing to merit consideration for Britain's team in European championships this summer.
